To Whom It May Concern: The NAB's efforts to limit the scope of satellite radio's offerings indicates to me that the NAB's members must really be feeling the effects of the fair and legal competition presented by Sirius and XM radio. The truth is that attempting to limit or prevent traffic and weather information from being broadcast on satellite radio is no different than attempting to limit their broadcast on cable or satellite television! Not only that, we, subscribers, elect to pay to have the conveniences and choices offered on satellite radio largely because of the absence or limitation of commercials (which are, of course, the lifeblood of the members of the NAB,) and the limitation of commercial influences upon the selection of what is broadcast on satellite (subscription) radio. Limiting that kind of choice and competition must truly be the (poorly) hidden agenda of the NAB. But aren't choice and competition what this country is all about?

Please do not allow the pressures brought to bear by the NAB to cause you to even consider limiting the first amendment rights of any broadcast entity to cover such public service programs as traffic and weather coverage, or anything else the NAB attempts to make fair game while broadcasting the same programming themselves.
